Sheriff's office making domestic violence response a high priority

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS Publisher Emeritus Domestic violence calls to Hancock County Sheriff's office have slowed very little during October and November, according to Sheriff Steve Garber.

Sheriff's deputies responded to 317 domestic violence calls for the first 11 months of 2002, almost at the rate of one a day. There were 334 days through the end of November.

From January 1, 2002 to September 12, the Sheriff's Department responded to 263 domestic violence offenses during that 255day period.

Garber is still optimistic about receiving a grant to enable the department to have a full-time investigator to handle domestic disturbance cases.

A grant has been applied for, and Garber on Tuesday said, "We have received verbal approval of the grant, but have not gotten it in writing yet. We are hoping to know by the end of January if the grant will be forthcoming."

Chief Investigator Bob Lambert has been recording the department's responses to the various calls received, and domestic violence is the most difficult for deputies to respond to.

One deputy in July, 2002 ended up in a scuffle with a domestic violence suspect and received cuts and bruis-

Family disturbances are the most difficult to sort out, according to law enforcement leaders, as many' times persons involved in them will turn on the officers trying to quell them.

In the 317 domestic disturbances the Sheriff's Department answered for the first 11 months of 2002, 193 arrests were made according to Lambert's

Lambert said, "There were 144 simple responses. Of these 123 were against males, three females and six were for juveniles."

There were no arrests in 148 responses because of various reasons. Those reasons could be no one wanting to file charges against a suspect, or the responding officers were unable to verify through injuries that someone had been assaulted Lambert said.

A total of 22 calls involved family disturbances, and 13 males, six females and two juveniles were arrested.

Domestic calls involve all combinations of father/son, people, mother/daughter, grandmother/grandchildren, husband/wife, girlfriend/boyfriend, etc., according to Garber.

for close to one-a-day call on domestic disturbances is because of an increase in the number of residents due to the county's growth.

"A person convicted of a domestic violence is subject to the loss of several rights, which is something many need to be aware of," Garber warned.

wide variety of cases and zen awareness and in reporting incidents, which helps many times in solving crime matters, Garber said.

If any citizens is aware of, or feels there is a possible crime being committed, they are urged to give the Sheriff's Department a call at 456-5101.

Hotel Reed owner asking city's help

BY MARY G. SEILEY Staff Writer

The owner of Hotel Reed wants the city's help in figuring out what to do with the former nursing home.

Advice may be on the way."

"I would like something from you guys as far as what you think would be feasible," Ted Cain told City Council members in a meeting this week.

They've agreed to meet Monday afternoon at the North Beach Boulevard/Ulman Avenue facility, along with the mayor and fire chief. Meanwhile, there's interest from neighboring First Presbyterian Church in a possible purchase of the property.

Cain so far has floated two ideas for the aging, deteriorated structure's future: tear it down and build a hotel that looks just like it, or tear it down and build a nursing home.

Both projects, however, have been idled by neighborhood concerns. There were fears that a rezoning to commercial status, which would permit a hotel on the site, would leave that property wide-open for some future, undesirable activity in a residential neighborhood.

Cain hit another snag in pursuing the hotel idea. When the rezoning idea failed, he'd hoped he could secure a special exception to the zoning ordinance to operate a hotel in the residential zone at issue. But he couldn't get the church's okay for a liquor license, and he says he can't operate a restaurant successfully without the ability to serve

Lastly, he proposed building a new nursing home on the same site footprint as the existing, 1933 building. But that idea was tabled by City Council months ago, because he didn't have enough details of how the structure k would appear.

Monday night, a frustrated Cain told council members that he can't afford to fully illustrate a new building. "I'm not prepared to spend $100,000 on something that may not happen," Cain said. The exterior, he added, "would be identical if it's a hotel or assisted living building. We didn't have any reason to change the exterior. We like it."

there were some "confusing" comments made when council last dealt with the matter, leading Cain to think that a full set of plans was requested for the nursing home. What the city wants, he said, is a basic, less costly rendering. And officials haven't abandoned the idea that the existing building, which was once a hotel, could be renovated instead of demolished. Cain said he'd have to hire a structural engineer to determine whether any of the building could be saved — including just its facade.

"It's very unusual behind that brick," he said, telling council there are three layers of masonry, with a total width of 18 to 20 inches. Some of the bricks are broken and crumbling, he said.

Council president Doug Seal said operations of the facility as a nursing home hold "no value to the city."

"We get $800 a year in taxes as it sits, as a nursing home," Seal said. If it were a 50-room hotel, at 80 percent occupancy, the hotel room tax would generate some $12,000, Seal estimat-

And, Seal and others stressed the economic value of having more tourists circulating in downtown Bay St. Louis.

Seal said the building obviously has weathered many a storm successfully, including . Hurricane Camille. "I'd have a hard time saying yeah, tear it down," Seal said, without knowing what its replacement would look like.

Ward 4 Council member Bobby Compretta said Cain doesn't need a "$100,000 drawing" of a replacement building, "just a sketch." Cain said the sketch would look just like the existing building does. Since the city has no historic preservation ordinance, Cain wouldn't need special permission to demolish the building, or approval of facade design for a new one.

Favre reminded the meeting that Cain would need a special exception to the zoning ordinance to put any use besides residential into place - nursing home or hotel restaurant. "We would love to see a hotel there," the mayor said. "That's where we make our bucks.'

That's what Cain said he wants too: a small scale Mayor Eddie Favre said hotel, where guests enter their rooms from interior halls, much like a large bed and breakfast. Favre said the true historical value of the building is its past as a hotel, not as a nursing home. *

The Presbyterian Church's pastor, Dr. Edward A. "Ted" Hanawalt, said Tuesday he sees the best use of the property as a nursing home — owned and operated by the church. "It would be a wonderful ministry for the church," said Hanawalt.

It would take an estimated $3 million to buy the property and renovate the existing structure for continued use as a nursing home, Hanawalt estimates. The renovations, he said, 'would just be a temporary resurrection of the building because the foundation is bad," he said. " I don't think the foundation can be repaired."

"Eventually, it will have to be torn down," he added of the existing structure.

Meanwhile, prospects for a federal faith-based social aid legislation brightened considerably Republicans gained control of the Senate, he said, and there's good chance that the national church organization would agree to send a team of ministers specializing in geriatric care, to assist at the home, he added.

The church, on Ulman opposite the rear of Hotel Reed, could sponsor crafts classes and activities for ambulatory nursing home residents, he said. The property offers a magnificent vista for the elderly, many of whom can't afford the fees of a high scale nursing home, he said.

The property, at an elevation of some 26 feet, is the highest piece of land anywhere on the Gulf Coast, Cain and Hanawalt say. Ultimately, the land could be the site of a new Presbyterian Church, said Hanawalt.

Hanawalt said Cain told him he doesn't want to sell the land, but would consider selling it to the church. The church's session, or governing body, expressed a great deal of interest in the potential purchase. Hanawalt said. Raising the necessary money for the project, however, "may be harder than I thought," he said. "People aren't returning my calls."

Meanwhile, Hanawalt is in Cain's corner on one key issue in the hotel proposal. Hanawalt doesn't object to Cain getting a liquor license for a proposed restaurant - but there's no support for that among the church's governing board.

He expressed sympathy Cain's apparent impasse. "I feel badly I haven't supported him more," he said.

On the evening of September 16th, 2002, the department Sheriff's received a call from Joe Cure, a senior living in Clermont Harbor, who was caring for his five year old grandchild. The call came from Cure's daughter's home, where he had managed to drive to for help, Barnett said.

Cure and his grandson were apparently sleeping when Gavillo allegedly forced his way into the house. Gavillo allegedly ordered Cure to open a safe he had in the house and when Cure could not, Gavillo allegedly shot him twice in the ear with a BB gun and hit him in the head with a blunt instrument, when many holiday festivities are held throughout the county.

'Tis the season to be sociable

One of the big events will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, and that is the eight annual Hancock County Library System's Holiday Tree Gala.

This is one of the elite events of the season, and makes it great is the involvement of folks from the community of all ages.

Just to see the Christmas trees themselves is a delight. There are those decorated by area school students, businesses, industries, etc. Judges will be looking for the top trees in 11 categories, all vying for top honors. And there will be musical entertainment, and of course Santa will be there to take the wishes of the youngsters.

There will be more than 60 decorated trees on display at the library located on Highway 90's Service "Road in Bay St. Louis.

Sundav afternoon.

While on the subject of the library, the Kiln Public Library's annual Community Christmas Tree Lighting is set for Monday, December 9 at 6 p.m.

This also a great library event that is well attended each year.

It is entertaining to watch the youngsters as they wait their turn to give Santa their wish list.

It is great to see the organization of a countywide arts council underway.

Over the vears, I can recall several small art groups, but not any spread throughout the county as

This is the time of year the organization now being planned for Hancock County.

We just have so many talented folks in our county, and it is great to see efforts being made to bring them together as a group.

The current movement's first meeting was sponsored Chamber of by the Tourism Commerce, Bureau, the Library Foundation, and the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

There were about 50 people who attended the first meeting.

One of the folks really involved in the Arts Council is Gwen Impson, who has been a member of several councils before returning to Bay St. Louis.

Memberships include individual artists, poets. writers. artisans/crafts friends of the arts, photographers, musicians, artrelated businesses, organizations such as the Bay St. I hope to see you at the Louis Little Theater, Coast library's Tree Gala on Youth Ballet, associated members and businesses and sponsors.

The proposed council is calling for names of local artists, art patrons, and businesses to be entered into a county directory.

I have seen a list of the ideas for the formation of an Arts Council for Hancock County, and believe me, it should be a great organization with many benefits.

Questionnaires are available at the Chamber of Commerce, or the Bay St. Louis branch of the public

Arts Council long overdue in Hancock

To the Editor:

A meeting to discuss the need for a Hancock County Arts Council was held recently at the Bay St. Louis branch of the Hancock Library.

In preparation for the meeting tables and chairs were set up in an informal arrangement. These were quickly filled up as people began arriving.

Soon we had to pull out more chairs and, then, still more chairs as the total rose to fifty people. For a first meeting the turnout was far greater than had been imagined.

This turnout on a drizzly Wednesday afternoon and the individual responses clearly show the need and desire for a county-wide arts organization.

Every area in the county was represented: Bay St. Waveland, Louis, Diamondhead, Pearlington and Kiln. Every sort of "artist" was represented as well: all manner of visual artists, writers, performing artists, musicians, and artisans.

Gallery owners, artsrelated businesses and friends of the arts were also represented. Spokespersons from the Bay St. Louis Little Theater and the Diamondhead Performing Arts were also present and indicated their desire to be included in an arts council.

Mayor Tommy Longo, from Waveland, and Mike Cuevas, director of Cultural Affairs for the City of Bay St. Louis, were present and pledged their support.

A questionnaire was passed out and the responses also indicate a commitment to help work to establish a non-profit, countywide umbrella arts organi-

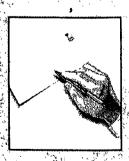

Individuals volunteered to pass out flyers, make phone calls, serve on a committee, work on preparing a data base, a directory and a web site.

I have no doubt that Hancock County Arts Council will become a reality. In part because of this initial outpouring of support from the community but also in large part because of the support already evidenced by the staff and volunteers from the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, the Hancock County Bureau of Tourism

GOP political hack Nick Walters, the party's 1999 that Tuck in the December, 2001 special legislative session was the chief culprit in thwarting a redistricting plan that would have been favorable more Democratic U.S. Rep Ronnie Shows.

Walters, now state director of the USDA's Rural Development Authority, was quoted a week ago as saying that "without Amy Tuck (3rd District U.S. Rep.) Chip Pickering would have been in jeopardy."

When the Democraticmajority Legislature failed to draw new U.S. House district lines, it played directly into the hands of the Mississippi Republican Party which all along wanted a federal court to redistrict the state.

That's exactly what happened. A three-judge federal panel made up of GOP appointees took over the case and in February, 2002 created a new district that virtually assured Pickering's re-election.

He was given his strongest white Republicanvoting bases, while Shows' former black Democratic voter base was cut from 40 to 30 per cent.

Tuck's defection to the candidate for Secretary of Republican Party raises the State, in public print under question: Will other scored the widespread belief Democratic office-holders follow her into the GOP, particularly now that Republicans nationwide are riding a heady political crest of success in the Nov. 5 elections?

Ever since this state lopsidedly voted for Republican Barry Goldwater in 1964, the possibility has been that Mississippi could flip-flop a one-party from Democratic state to a oneparty GOP state.

As has become increasingly apparent since heavy doses of campaign cash have been introduced into our political process from out-of-state sources in recent years, Republicans have increasingly been able to control dialogue in the general public and even in the press.

The most dangerous development is that the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the nation's richest and most powerful business has "adopted" Mississippi as a veritable step-child whose political care and feeding it seems to

Hope Haven/Fire Dogs tournament a huge success

The weather was beautiful, the scores were low and the event was a huge success. The recent Fire Dogs/Hope Haven tournament went off without a hitch with over 100 teams enjoying the sunshine provided by guest celebrity Mike Reader, weatherman of WLOX T.V.

The tournament raised over $5,000 for the local shelter for abused and neglected children. The event was chaired by Jack Klein and Bob English and involved many businesses and residents of the Diamondhead community.

Over 60 local businesses and individuals supplied door prizes and gifts for the event as well as sponsoring holes and entering teams.

"The Diamondhead community has always been great supporters of Hope Haven," said Terry Latham, Hope Haven director, "but this event shines because it takes so much work to put a good golf tournament on. From the POA and Hoppy at the Pro Shop who served as host, Jack and Bob and all of their volunteers, the local businesses who purchased hole sponsorships and provided gifts, the players, and Jim English who hosted the awards ceremony at his restaurant and donated all of the hole sponsorship money to our shelter all I can say is thank you ... each and every one of you has done a wonderful thing."

The monies raised will be used for shelter expenses and directly on the children. This year Hope Haven has sheltered over 140 children and expects to have 10 to 12 children in the shelter over the Christmas period.

Save on heating bills this season

Tips for Reducing Home Energy Costs

The unrest in the Middle East and Iraq, combined with the upcoming chilly weather, will likely translate into higher energy bills for Bay Saint Louis-area residents.

"There are ways in which to cut down on these expenses this coming winter with a little preparation now," advises Bill North, Bay Saint Louis-area director of HouseMaster, the premier, home inspection franchise organization in the U.S. and Canada.

"With proper maintenance and upkeep, as well as some adjustments in living habits, homeowners can greatly cut down on heating expenditures while increasing efficiency and protecting the environment," says North. The greatest loss of energy in the home occurs during winter, as consumption increases.

Here are tips from the experts at HouseMaster home inspection to keep warm and within your budget:

• Reduce the use of exhaust fans in the kitchen and bath, which rapidly remove heated air from the home.

Avoid opening windows and doors except to remove excess humidity or strong cooking odors.

• Doors to spare rooms should be kept shut with the heat turned off in each room.

 Garages containing furnaces or water heaters should be fully insulated.

• Home entry doors should be weather-stripped, and a storm door with a closer (that will close it promptly and keep it closed) should be installed.

 Caulk around windows and door cracks to reduce air and moisture leak-age.

• Leaves and dust should be cleared from compressor-condenser units.

• Insulate hot water pipes and heating vents in unheated crawl spaces to prevent heat loss; insulate cold water pipes to prevent freezing of water and burst pipes.

• Attic vents should be kept open so that outdoor air circulates and removes water vapor, but ducts should be insulated to reduce heat loss. Keeping a "cold roof" (allowing outdoor air to circulate through an unfinished attic) can also help reduce future ice dam and roof leak problems.

124 Court Street • Bay St. Louis

(228) 467-5474 • www.seacoastecho.com

• Change the filter on the furnace so that it will run more efficiently (cost is about $2 per filter).

• Install a set-back thermostat that automatically turns heat on and off with a timer. This can be set to automatically lower the heat while the home's residents are at school/work, and set to click on again a 1/2 hour before people arrive home.

* Have your heating system maintained by professionals to keep it functioning property for years to come.

Homeowners are asked to run through this checklist and make the necessary adjustments before the arrival of the rough winter months.

According to North,
"These guidelines will keep energy waste to a minimum, ease the stress on your budget and help conserve energy throughout the season."

As we get closer to the holiday season, we hear words like fir, Scotch pine and spruce mentioned in association with Christmas trees. But I want you also to think about spruce as one of the most beautiful native pines for the landscape.

I dare not get in any kind of argument with a forester, urban or otherwise, about

To me, however, the spruce pine Pinus glabra named in 1765 by John Bartram in Savannah, Ga. is the most beautiful of all pines available to homeowners for the landscape.

The bark is a very attractive, reddish gray-brown that is smooth on young trees and grooved and "spruce-like" on older trees.

The spruce pine is native to the lower halves of Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia as well as very small areas of Louisiana. Florida and South Carolina; are the U.S. these Department of Agriculture's hardiness zones 8 and 9.

Folks at North Carolina State University say it is also well suited to zone 7, which includes the rest of Mississippi. Steve Dicke, a \mathbf{with} MSU's forester Extension Service, agrees and said that while the spruce pine is not well suited to the timber industry, it has the branch flexibility to withstand ice storms.

It is easy to spot this pine because of its unique look. The needles are short, dark green and twisted in bundles of two. Its dense growth gives it the appearance of belonging in the Rockies or Cascade Mountains.

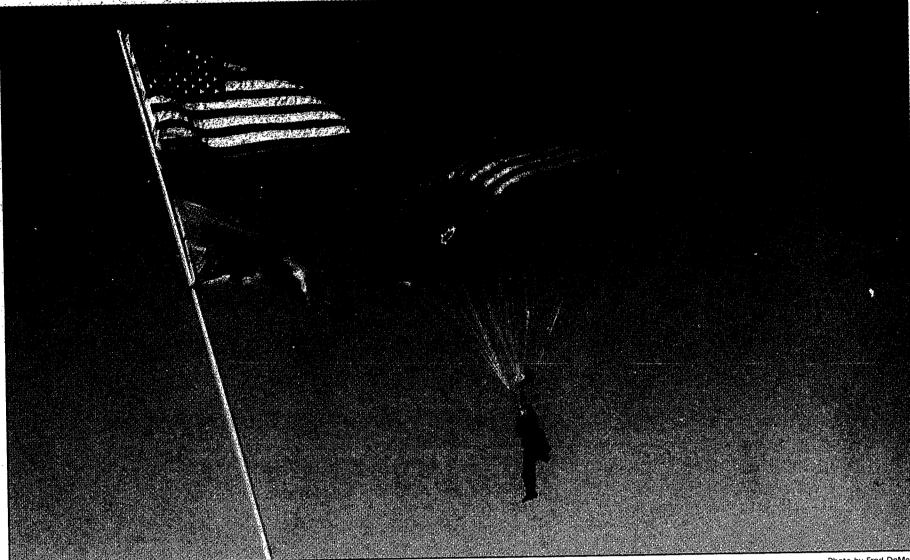

In the landscape, it is superior as a screen for privacy or a windbreak. It's an excellent background for beds of azaleas or small trees like the redbud.

Though they can reach 50-plus feet, they are most often seen 20 to 30 feet tall with multiple branches extending almost as wide.

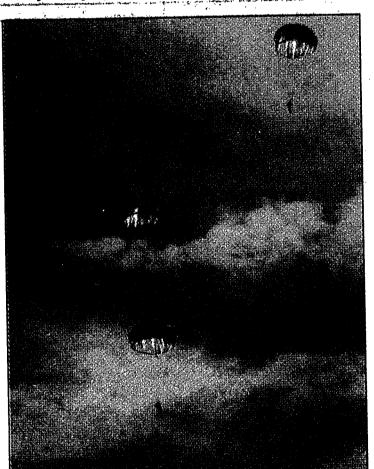

The small cones remain on the trees for three to four years, and as typical with other pines, they feed birds and animals and provide good cover for nesting-.

To be perfectly honest, your basic local garden center usually doesn't stock the spruce pine, but they are found at garden centers that sell a lot of natives. What this means is if the native garden centers can

When Bay St. Louis was incorporated in 1818, it was called

The St. Stanislaus Rocka-chaws tallied a 66-35 win over the visiting St. John Eagles on Tuesday to push their record to 8-1 overall.

The Rocks got 18 points from junior Mario Faranda en route to the win. Faranda had four dunks in the contest. Rob Murray scored 13 points and Sam Tart added 11 points to round out the double-digit scorers.

Sam Tart led the Rocks in the third period with 7 points including a trey to close out the period and give SSC a 50-27 lead heading into the final period.

"Next morning they were joined at fort Petites Coquilles [on the northern end of the Rigolets] by two small boats and nineteen men from [the fort].

"They remained at, the fort to fit masts and sails to the boats, and to distribute the men among the boats so as to give to each a few sailors; for the greater part of their number were soldiers and along-shore men.

"On the 20th they proceeded to pass Chef-Menteur, and arrived at the [American] militia camp, situated three miles from Lake Borgne at 2 p.m. Here they reconnoitered the enemy's boats, passing and re-passing from their army to their fleet [anchored off Ship/Cat Islands].

"At 9 p.m. they got under weigh with muffled oars: at 10 were in the lake, and took a course along the land towards the Rigolets. At about 11 p.m. a large boat was discovered at anchor; immediately all hands pulled up to her as fast as possible. She was boarded on the bow, stern and centre nearly at the same moment.

At 1 a.m. another sortie was made, and rowed about the lake till nearly day-light, but nothing could be found.

"22d, at 4 a.m. went out again, and steered towards the Rigolets: at 7 a.m. captured a transport boat; at half past 8 captured a transport schooner of one hundred and ten tons, having only a few casks rum on board; soon after captured two launches.

"Before 10 a.m. captured three more boats; and at 11 reached the mouth of the Rigolets with some of the small boats. When unfortunately Mr. Shields was obliged to set fire to the schooner, then about two miles off the Rigolets, the bar of which would not permit her to pass.

"The wind came out strong against us, the tide was also running out rapidly and in truth boats from the schooner had hardly reached the shore, when we perceived boats standing towards her from all directions. "The British boats, after vainly attempting to board the burning schooner, approached the shore. When they discovered [the men] to be Americans, they sent three boats laden with troops, to land about a mile and a half above them.

"A party of twenty men, led by Dr. Morrell, marched to meet them, and concealed themselves in the high grass, near where the first boat landed. As soon as the enemy began to land, a fire was commenced on them: the men being sta-tioned a few yards apart, presented the appearance of a long

"It was now nearly 4 p.m., our men much fatigued, the prisoners trouble-some, the wind and current so strong as to make it impossible to get through the Rigolets, and a gun-boat could be seen beating up for the expedition.

"It was determined that Dr. Morrell should go to fort Petites Coquilles (nine miles off) for re-enforcements. Accordingly, he proceeded in a well-manned gig, and at 9 p.m. he reached the fort.

"Captain Newman immediately embarked forty of his men; but before they could arrive, Mr. Shields thought proper to discharge, on parole, all prisoners on the western side. With the greatest exertion he was able to join the launch on the other side and reach the fort the next day at 2 o'clock, where twentyone prisoners were delivered to captain Newman.

A typical day for a SEAL begins early. After you are briefed by officers on the plan for the day, physical training begins about 7:30 a.m. The men are required to perform a minimum of an excellent physical condition sions seen on television, on required for the missions they perform the SEALs rely mainly on a combination of calisthenics, running and swimming, said new Commanding Officer of Boat Unit 22 Pat Butler, though individuals may participate in other forms of training, such as lifting weights. The rest of the day is spent training for deployment to the currently scheduled mission. This may include shooting, demolition, jump training or other, depending on the nature of the mission, said Poladian. Basically, he said, teams train for six months, then perform a mission for six months. That is the normal routine of a SEAL team, whose most important mainstay is team work.

To get an idea of the physical stamina required to be a SEAL, consider the test required to even be considered for admission to BUDs training. The standardized test requires you to: Swim 500 yards using the breast or side stroke in 12.5 minutes; rest ten minutes; perform a minimum of 42 push-ups in two minutes; Poladian, a 27 year veteran hour and a half of exercise rest two minutes; perform a of the service, did reveal each morning. To stay in the minimum of 50 sit-ups in two minutes; rest two minutes, perform a minim of six pull-ups; rest ten minutes; run 1.5 miles wearing boots and long pants in 11.5 minutes.

Interested? The training for a team begins with about six months of BUDs training that includes diving, land warfare, and basic conditioning, with a week of the basic conditioning called "Hell Week," five and a half days of continuous training with a maximum of four hours sleep. After BUDs, recruits continue training in parachute jumping, medical skills, and are offered a variety of opportunities for advanced training.

The teams train at Stennis an average of twice a year. They hope to return to our area for more jump training in February.

INC.

"Sounds of the Holidays 2002: A Holy Night" promises to yield visions of sugar plums in the heads of all who attend the Christmas opener today at the Grand Casino Biloxi at 8 p.m.

David Delk, who took over the reigns of directing the show in 1999, has enlisted the vocal talents of several well-known Coast including performers, Karen Abernathy, Keith Ballard, Angelina Davis, Garguilo-Evans, Gaston Hewes, Mike Lacy and many more. Even Delk will sing a few tunes him-

Some of the Christmas favorites they will sing include "O, Holy Night," "Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas" and "Baby, It's Cold Outside."

For those new to this musical celebration, do not expect the same old Christmas show. Delk and his team have wrapped this event in glittering tinsel and decked the halls with plenty of class.

The female performers in the core group sashay around the stage in evening gowns borrowed from Gatlin's while the men saunter in front of the crowd in handsome tuxedos.

Along with the core group, the professionalism of the event is further boosted by appearances by the Ballet Theatre South under the direction of Cheryl

BY SHANNON JENKINS Black; K and Company under the direction of Jennifer Krohn; Mississippi Sound under the direction of Marilyn Lott, Mississippi Gulf Coast Community Perkinston College, Campus; Shooting Stars of the W.I.N.G.S. division at Lynn Meadows Discovery Center and the Lynn Meadows Children Chorus; and The USM Gulf Coast Civic Chorale under the direction Joanne Edwards accompanied by Dr. John Adams. This brings the cast to about 90 members.

Delk contributes a lot of the show's elegance to the Grand Casino.

"Riding on the coat tails of the Grand gives the show credibility as a first-class entertainment event," Delk

"The Grand has been very supportive. They offer their costume person, light person, stage manager, stage crew and sound technicians."

The show, which now attracts over 1,000 people each year, not only is affordable and entertaining, but it's also for a good cause.

Proceeds from "Sounds of the Holidays" benefit the American Association, which conducts cardiovascular research, public education and community service programs. "The show is one of the association's biggest fundraisers," said Rachel Rath, regional director of the Gulf Coast Division of the organization. "And, it's on of the favorites."

The show, which raised over $32,000 last year, is also one of the performer's favorite shows to participate in each year.

For more information about the show or to order tickets, contact Rachel Rath at 864-1629 or the Grand Casino Theatre Box Office at 436-2804.
